

Tips about Post Writing

Here are some other tips to guide you as you think about what to do as you develop your post(s):

- Read the other blog comments before writing. You might not want to ask the same question that someone else posted just a few comments ago.
- Be informed. Nothing's worse than posting incorrect information.
- If you do post wrong information, expect that someone may point it out in a future comment and your credibility can be questioned.
- Don't try to steal the show. You don't need to post a comment that's longer than the original blog post.
- Expect your opinions to be challenged. Conversely, perhaps you should expect no one to share a comment if you don't reach out with your work.
- If you go disagree with a blogger's ideas, others may or may not agree with you. A diverse range of ideas is OK and good. View this as a discussion, not a confrontation or battle.
- Proofread what you've typed. Once you submit your comment, you won't be able to edit out that typo. So get it right the first time.
- Constantly re-read and try to perfect all small and large errors of grammar and spelling.
